| About Workshop |

The pharmaceutical industry is among the most research-intensive and highly regulated industries. The industry is known as 'zero-mistake-industry' and product expected shall be 'zero-defect-product'. The cost of product development is very high and the gestation period from research to market launch is long. Hence, getting a respectable ROI is very challenging. Any small error or oversight in development or change in regulations can cost dearly with respect to time and finances. Well planned actions in pharmaceutical product life cycle management are the key to the success. The product development process is largely inclusive of aspects related to IPRs, design and strategy applying principles of quality by design (QbD), risk management and use of statistical design of experiment (DoE) including preformulation, formulation development, scale-up and packaging. The workshop aims to leverage teachers to teach this subject to the level to meet industry's technical manpower needs.
